

ABSTRACT

The invention is of an improved peritoneal dialysis catheter the structure of which permits simultaneous inflow and outflow therapy. The design eliminates angular deviations of conduits to prevent occlusion through biological debris, insures optimal seating and sealing in the abdominal wall, and, to previously proposed designs for similar devices, is possible to manufacture using existing technology and manufacturing techniques.